The Sight Center's broad program of services would be impossible to implement without the time and talents donated by a large corps of dedicated volunteers.

During one recent summer month, 260 hours of volunteer time were donated to such tasks as office work, taping, personal services that included reading newspapers and books and writing checks, driving, board and committee meetings, large print typing, and recreational activities. An average of 55 volunteers has been on hand each month during the last four-month period to carry out diversified responsibilities.

Space requirements do not permit a listing of names. But we take this opportunity to thank each volunteer who gave of his or her time to be concerned for the visually handicapped.

Depressed Funds Force Layoffs

Recently, the Sight Center was forced to close its cafeteria and lay off nine staff people. The decision was made by the Board of Trustees as the result of several factors.

First, funds channeled since May to the Ohio Rehabilitation Services Commission have been drastically reduced, and ORSC has been unable to pay us the total projected cost for our services.

Second, today's automotive-related gas-saving economy has affected the sheltered workshop. The workshop would like to diversify and is actively seeking other types of work. (See first item under Sign Posts.)

While the Board regrets having to take this action, it believes priorities must be maintained. Direct service providers will remain on staff. Positions eliminated were those in which the duties could be assumed by volunteers, interns, or existing personnel. Several programs of limited scope also have been discontinued at this time.

Jim Huff (right) and his Country Friends provided the entertainment for the June Progressive Club meeting. The group consists of Herschel Brumett on the bass guitar, his son Ed on drums, Dave Moore on hoe down fiddle, and Gary Kuhn on the electric guitar. Jim, who is blind, reports that Dave Moore placed first in a fiddling competition with his own age group at the Wood County Fair, and third in open competition at the Lucas County Fair.

A New Image To Meet Contemporary Needs

Newly renovated facilities at the Sight Center

the SIGHT CENTER

Have you noticed?

The Toledo Society for the Blind has a new image. Not only does it boast an expanded name—The Sight Center, A Service of the Toledo Society for the Blind—but it also has newly renovated facilities.

The changes have been made for a number of reasons, according to William A. Marti, president of the Board of Trustees. The name, "The Toledo Society for the Blind," has proved to be restrictive during recent years. The Society is the only center serving the blind and visually impaired in a 23-county area in northwestern Ohio and southeastern Michigan. Because our name included the word, "Toledo," many visually impaired people living in these areas thought we served only the blind citizens of Toledo. Frankly, with blindness on the increase, we can't afford to have these kinds of misconceptions.

And, too, the word, "Blind," had a negative connotation. Eighty-five per cent of people who are legally blind have some vision. Yet, our name implied to many that our services were rendered only to those who were totally blind.

Sight Center Interns Hosts Supplement Staff Conference

"Diabetes and Blindness" was the featured topic of a multi-state conference hosted by the Sight Center recently.

Educators, nursing home, hospital, and agency staff persons serving the blind from Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Kentucky attended the conference.

The conference addressed the implications for the blind of recent legislative amendments in addition to offering a number of workshops.

Guest speakers included Fred Whitehouse, M.D., chief of metabolics at Ford Hospital in Detroit and president of the American Diabetes Association, and Alan Dinsmore, governmental relations specialist for the American Foundation for the Blind, Washington, D.C.

Rebecca Bechstein is serving an internship at the Sight Center in the social services department. She is a student in social work from Bowling Green State University.

Becky is providing direct services to clients. She assists in the intake process, works with individuals and families who are dealing with the emotional aspects of vision loss and is involved with some group work. Becky, who is visually impaired, works with the aid of her guide dog, Doobie. She plans to receive a bachelor's degree in December.

Jerry Rastrick recently joined the Sight Center as a rehabilitation teacher intern working on his master's degree at University of Northern Illinois at De Kalb. Jerry, who is visually impaired, formerly was an agricultural arts teacher. He will assist Gayle Krause in the rehabilitation process of visually handicapped clients.

Has Your Will Expired?

Wills do not expire, of course, at least not in the same way drivers' licenses do. Your will can become outdated, however, losing much of its original purpose and effectiveness.

The circumstances which prompted you to write your will the way you did are likely to change over the years. You can "renew" your will by reviewing it from time to time with your attorney, making whatever changes and additions are needed.

You may want to include a provision in your will to help the Sight Center. By including such a bequest, you are making your participation in the work of the Sight Center permanent.

Barry McEwen, the Sight Center's executive director, will be happy to discuss various types of will provisions with you at your convenience.

way of living to the fullest degree possible with dignity and self-respect. In other words, we try to teach people with vision loss how to mentally "see" in a sighted world. "Blind," prevented many partially sighted individuals from utilizing our services.

Our newly renovated structure helps to better accommodate expanded and upgraded services and staff. Pleasant working quarters help staff persons to attain primary working goals.

The Sight Center is pleased with its new image. Obviously, to many of our old friends, we will continue to be known as the Toledo Society for the Blind. Our name is a matter of preference. More importantly, we are in a better position to meet the contemporary needs of blind and visually impaired people.

Eye Facts

Glaucoma, which is present in 9 to 10 per cent of the aging population, is a condition in which the fluid pressure in the eye is too high. The onset of glaucoma may go unnoticed since in its most common form the loss of vision is gradual, beginning with the peripheral vision. If glaucoma is diagnosed and treated early, however, further visual loss can be prevented.

A cataract forms when the lens of the eye changes from a clear, transparent structure to a cloudy or opaque one. Cataracts usually develop gradually causing hazy vision in the earlier stage.

Blind Children Hunt for Bird-Chirping Eggs

Scott Parker proudly displays his find.

"I found one! Wow—here's another one!" Eleven-year-old Scott Parker was thrilled. He now had two eggs to swap for candy.

For the first time in the Toledo area, last April blind children participated in an Easter egg hunt.

Approximately 25 children scurried about the Dana Corporation grounds searching for the eggs by listening for birdlike chirps. The chirping sounds were battery powered noisemakers that members of the Toledo Council of Telephone Pioneers (an employee service group of the Ohio Bell Telephone Company) inserted into plastic eggs sold with women's pantyhose.

A small transistorized oscillator is wired to a tiny radio speaker. Each chirp lasts about five seconds and repeats itself after about five seconds of silence.

After the egg hunt, parents and children were served a McDonald's lunch inside Dana headquarters.

And what better way is there to end an Easter egg hunt!

A number of adults helped distribute candy.
